BIO

England, 2000

Pandora Covell is a multidisciplinary artist who lives and works in London. Painting is at the heart of her process, but she combines a multitude of processes which allows her to create a smorgasbord of digested ideas, colours, materials, thoughts and feelings. These can then be distilled, expanded, distilled again and re-expanded into calculated entropies.

“I am particularly interested in the digestion of ideas and creating a personal cosmology in which my own visual language feeds organically from one work to the next. This holistic way of working allows me to produce managed entropies of visual interconnectivity.”
